ABOUT THE WIDE, WIDE
WORLD
AND ONE BIG BREWERY
GERMANY HELPS SILVER.
RUSSIA REFUSES TO BLOW

What we call "Democracy," namely, the rule and control of the many by a selected prosperous few, seems to be giving way to dictatorship which means a return to absolutism, not dependent as with kings on the accident of birth.

Germany, according to dispatches from Berlin, may follow the example of Italy, Turkey and Russia, operating under a one-man dictatorship with Brüning for dictator, backed by the military power of the Reichswehr.

However, events may not move so rapidly. The Germans have been educated in politics and government for years by the social Democratic party. They will not too hastily abandon their republic or Von Hindenburg, the loyal old man who so ably has steadied Germany thus far.

In New York City, prohibition Administrator McCampbell, who seems to take his work seriously, has seized and closed a gigantic brewery said to have been producing millions of gallons of beer a month for many years.

Gentlemen mentioned as owners of the institution are "Oweny" Madden and "Big Bill" Dwyer. The brewery occupies an entire block in 10th avenue, has been operated continuously, and it seems remarkable that other prohibition agents and policemen have not noticed it on the landscape.

A New York reporter says the place has been well "guarded." Anybody who came near immediately was asked by a policeman: "What are you doing around here?"

It would be interesting to know how many millions of bribes and blackmail that one brewery has paid in the last few years to federal agents, local police, political bosses and others.

Acting on a change in the currency laws, Germany's Reichsbank is putting into circulation about $250,000,000 worth of silver currency.

The use of silver by the Reichsbank might suggest a good idea to this and other countries that, with their worship of the gold fetish, have almost destroyed silver's value.

Silver and gold have gone side by side as money for 5,000 years, and should continue to do so, on the proper ratio.

It is in the power of this government to restore the value of silver, in collaboration with Great Britain, which recently and foolishly did what it could to destroy silver by attempting to put India on a gold basis.

Production of copper has increased the output of silver enormously. But that increase would not be greater than the increase in international wealth and demand for money, if men would stop cutting each other's throats and concentrate on industry and prosperity.

An able American back from Russia says the Stalin plan will succeed, and won't bother us, because there will be no dumping of goods.

Russians will need for themselves

BONES OF CHILD REPORTED FOUND IN FIRE'S ASHES

Those of Two-Year-Old Youngster, Belief of Lisbon Physician

SHERIFF PROBES MYSTERY BLAZE

Discovery Is Made By Madison Township Farm Tenant

Charred bones, believed by Dr. J. N. Robinson of Lisbon to be those of a two-year-old child, were picked from the ashes of a brush fire Wednesday afternoon on the James McIntosh farm on the Lincoln highway, Madison township, opposite the East Liverpool airport, by Sheriff William J. Barlow. Barlow has begun an investigation.

While it was still dusk last Thursday evening, visitors at the airport field report they heard the scream of a woman, and some of them rushed to the highway, only to observe a closed automobile starting out after being turned at the intersection of the airport road and the Lincoln highway.

Across the highway in the woods, a fire was observed burning, but little attention was given to this incident at the time because the grove has been frequently visited by picnickers.

Oliver Campbell, a tenant on the McIntosh farm, later visited the spot where the fire was observed burning, and after he discovered bones in the ashes, notified Sheriff Barlow.

Residents observed the same automobile returning south that followed the costless man who carried the bundle.

The Lincoln highway in this part of Madison township was only recently graded for concrete surfacing, and has been little traveled of late.

Maniac Attacks Family, Runs Amuck in Street of Mining Village

(By Associated Press)
MERCER, PA., July 23.—Five persons were killed and three wounded, when a crazed man attacked members of his family and others in a small mining village near Leeburg today.

Pronounced Insane
Marko Demofonti, 46, who was pronounced insane by physicians yesterday and was to have been removed to an institution for the insane today, shot and killed his wife and her sister, in his home with a revolver and then went to the street of the village, firing at random at other villagers.

The wounded:
Tony Scellino, 10, seriously wounded; Mrs. Mike Banan, and her daughter, Flora, 12.

Attacker Shot

The shooting occurred at No. 2 mine of the Sharon Coal and Limestone company.

Demofonti was a miner by occupation, but because of his condition had not been working in the mine. He had been acting queerly, but had not been violent and was not regarded dangerous.

County Wheat Sells At 50 Cents Bushel

Columbiana county wheat is being sold to millers in this territory for 50 cents per bushel, one mill having purchased more than 1,000 bushels at this market.

Farmers have announced that the yield per acre this season is about double that of last year, and that from present indications little stock will be held by the growers for a higher future market.

Threshing is being done on some of the farms, and threshing outfits will be active until late in August.

PLAN MEASURES TO AID RENEWAL OF CONFIDENCE

Powers Approve Move to Extend German Short Term Credits

HELP IS PLEDGED AT LONDON PARLEY

German Representatives, However, See Problems In Future

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, July 23.—Renewal of short term credits maturing in the next few weeks and measures to establish confidence in Germany so that eventual long term credits will be possible were approved by the seven-power conference on Germany's situation at the conclusion of its work this afternoon.

The meeting was adjourned with a round of speeches in which the heads of the various delegations expressed their appreciation of the spirit of friendliness which pervaded the conference, and later there was an official communique which said "the governments are ready to cooperate so far as lies within their power to restore confidence."

Breucing Silent
There was, however, no disguising the gravity of the German representatives as they left the conference room.

Chancellor Brüning declined to make any statement, and while Foreign Minister Curtius was officially hopeful, other members of the delegation remarked privately that the conference had only tided Germany over the immediate future and the contingencies of the next few days may renew the crisis.

Besides the resolution extending the $100,000,000 Central bank credit which matures August 16, and another recommending that "concerted measures" will be taken to maintain the volume of credits already in Germany, there are two other phases of the meeting's final report.

Would Study Needs
The first of these is the recommendation that the world bank at Basel be invited to set up immediately a committee of representatives of the Central banks to inquire into the immediate future needs of Germany and to study the possibilities of converting part of the short-term credits into long-term credits.

The second phase is an expression of commendation for the guarantee recently placed at the disposal of the German gold discount bank by the leaders of German industry and finance.

SHEET AND TUBE STOCKHOLDERS GET DIVIDENDS

Will Receive Any Declaration After Today By New Ruling

(By Associated Press)
YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 23.—Holders of approximately 330,000 shares of Youngstown Sheet and Tube company stock, who lost their voting and dividend rights in the fight over the company's proposed merger with Bethlehem Steel corporation, will receive any dividends declared after today.

The dividend rights were regained when an amendment to the state corporation law became effective today.

Attorneys on both sides of the merger battle line are trying to determine what disposition may be made of an accumulation of $1,732,500 withheld from the dissenters. It is likely that a court decision will be asked.

The corporation code originally held that dissenters lost voting and dividend rights, but could obtain interest on the fair cash value of their stock after consummation of a merger. The amendment provides that dissenters are entitled to dividends, but does not give them voting rights. The chief dissenting stockholder is Cyrus S. Elton of Cleveland, sponsor of the battle against the merger, who resigned from the company's board of directors this week.

It will last approximately 2 hours. Mack says he will visit stores during the drive, wait on customers and perform other unique stunts.

At the close of the tour he plans to drive to the Penney store, and walk along the ledge while still blindfolded.

DRY AGENTS ARE KILLED; NAB SLAYER

(By Associated Press)
FORT WAYNE, IND., July 23.—Four hours after he shot and killed two federal prohibition agents to escape a trap they laid for him, George Adams, reputed Fort Wayne bootlegger, and formed convict, was captured by local police early today.

Corned on a road at the south edge of the city with a load of liquor the agents had ordered last night, Adams shot and killed at close range John J. Wilson, 40, of Rockwell Center, Ia., ranking special agent in the Indianapolis prohibition enforcement office. Wilson was said by his companions to be unarmed.

Then, wounded in the neck and cheek by shots from the gun of Walter M. Gilbert, 33, special agent from Cincinnati, Adams returned the fire and Gilbert fell, fatally wounded. He died an hour later in a Fort Wayne hospital.

Dive For Cover

A special federal prohibition informer, C. E. Green, of Portland, Ind., and another special agent, Oliver J. Gettle of Indianapolis, who said Adams "seemed crazy" dived for cover to escape the fire from Adams' gun. Both were cut by barbed wire fencing in a culvert into which they dropped.

Adams made his escape, and a wide search was organized. Local police, tipped off by federal agents, captured him without a shot being fired.

FORMER POLICE OFFICER FACES LIQUOR CHARGE

Indictment Returned As Result of Party Held In Steubenville

(By Associated Press)
STUEBENVILLE, July 23.—Former Police Lieut. Henry Brooks was indicted by the Jefferson county grand jury on a charge of furnishing liquor to a minor today following the investigation of an alleged party here attended by several Canton and Steubenville policemen.

Brooks was suspended from the force for 30 days after the party and when he returned to work was reduced to the rank of patrolman. Patrolman H. E. West of Canton was dismissed as a result of the party.

Henry Oster, another Canton patrolman, is awaiting preliminary hearing here in a charge of assault and battery against Marie Lancelotte, 19, of Canton, whom he is alleged to have attempted to throw in front of an automobile, while the party was going on.

Following its report on the alleged party the grand jury returned to session to consider reports of alleged illegal registration of new voters in preparation for the municipal primary election next month.

Law Experts Study County Litigation

LISBON, July 23.—Representatives of the Institute of Law, Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md., have concluded a partial survey of the activity of the courts of this county, the records in the office of Clerk of Courts John A. Noble having been reviewed covering a period of years. Twenty-six special studies are being carried on.

The report of records of court cases in this county will be included in an informative report covering nearly 100,000 cases in Ohio and obtained from practically every county in the state.

The survey is being financed by the university, a group of citizens and corporations of Ohio, and also by the Maryland legislature.

From the investigation, the institute aims to learn the trend of litigation and ascertain its human causes and effects.

Repulses Friends To Commit Suicide

CLEVELAND, O., July 23.—After an ambulance crew balked his effort to commit suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning here early today, Frank Kerhart, 52, fought off his would-be rescuers and shot himself to death. Neighbors said he formerly was a wealthy contractor in Chicago.

Patrolman Harry Eaton and Fireman Harvey Burns found Kerhart semi-conscious from the fumes of his automobile motor. He had shut himself in his garage.

Kerhart refused to allow ambulance men to use a resuscitator on him, after he had been carried into the house. When Eaton left the room, he broke loose from Burns and ran back to the garage with a driving off Burns with his fists. Kerhart obtained a revolver and shot himself twice. He had been despondent over losses in the 1929 stock collapse.

Explosion Occurs In gasoline Stove As She Cans Fruit

Mrs. John Perren, 36, is in Central Clinic hospital suffering from burns on the arms and body today, the result of a fire which Wednesday afternoon destroyed her home on the North Benton rd., near Yankee crossing, four miles north of Salem.

An explosion of a gasoline stove while Mrs. Perren was working in the kitchen of the home, canning fruit, caused the fire. She was enveloped in flames, but saved her own life when she rushed from the house into the yard where she extinguished the flames encircling her body by rolling in the grass, relatives said.

Mrs. Perren's condition today was reported fair by hospital attendants, who say she will recover.

The house, a nine-room frame structure, was burned to the ground with furniture and household furnishings. Loss is estimated at more than $5,000 by relatives.

The flames spread rapidly to other sections of the home. Mrs. Perren's husband and his brother were working in a nearby field, the woman being alone in the home when the fire occurred.

The two men were attracted to the blaze by flames shooting from the house but were able to save only a few furnishings.

SEVILLE UNDER RULE OF FORCE

Martial Law Declared After Seventeen Persons Are Killed

MADRID, July 23.—With Seville under martial law as the result of disorders in which 17 persons were killed, the tenseness of Spain's political situation increased today as the nation looked forward to a change in government next week.

It was predicted that when the assembly is formally constituted Monday or Tuesday, the cabinet would immediately resign. Forecasts were that the parliament would choose Alcala Zamora as president—the now holds that post provisionally—and that he would summon either Manuel Azana, present war minister, or Alejandro Derraux, foreign minister, to the premiership.

The seriousness of the situation in Seville was made clear when martial law was pronounced only half an hour after Miguel Maura, minister of the interior, announced he would oppose calling in the military authorities

DOING THEIR BIT

Rum runners are thoroughly despicable, of course. But they have their points—such as helping the United States to keep itself in a state of preparation for war.

Rum runners, since improved methods bear fruit in the form of increased profits, have a strong incentive to keep their procedure up to the minute. It is a stronger incentive than the coast guard would have, if the coast guard's principal business were not that of fighting the rum runners. Competition keeps everything even.

Adding to Uncle Sam's new worries over prohibition enforcement along the Atlantic coast is a recent rum-running trick of using noxious gas to halt pursuers. An incident in which members of a coast guard crew were made helpless in the choking, blinding fumes of a smoke screen laid down by a Canadian rum runner is the subject of a complaint that may be addressed to the Canadian government by Uncle Sam. A little bit of poison gas goes a long way when enforcement of federal prohibition is the relatively unimportant issue. Uncle Sam would prefer to stick to more conservative methods—shooting preferably.

There's another side to the affair, however. The coast guard is one branch of the service that doesn't have to engage in costly sham battles to keep its touch with the art of killing before getting killed. It can count on a real enemy, an ingenious criminal who keeps it looking sharp year in and year out. When speakeasy patrons in New York City leaf out $10 bills for "stuff just off the boat" they might well ease their sluggish consciences by figuring that a third of their overhead in the business of making life enjoyable can be charged to keeping the coast guard on its toes. And if war breaks out the coast guard will know what to do. It's been at war for the last 10 years.

REWARDS

The man who leaves an estate of a million dollars is acclaimed successful. He evidently got out of life what he wanted, people presume. His reward was ample for his efforts.

Dr. Albert Michelson, the renowned physicist, left an estate of $37,000. When he died a few months ago, however, no one was concerned about the estate. They were concerned solely with the world's loss in the death of so great a man.

He died while a device designed to measure the speed of light was being demonstrated successfully. He measured the fixed stars. He told men that there are suns 300 times as great as the one which warms the earth. He served as President of the National Academy of Sciences, was a Nobel prize winner, and holder of the Copley medal of the Royal Society of England. He had been honored countless times for his distinguished service to science, and enjoyed a respected position among learned men and women of all nations.

Yet, he did not amass as much wealth as a wrestler or a clever professional golfer. Moving picture stars and radio crooners make as much in a month as this distinguished American saved in a lifetime, and he was by no means a reckless spender.

Can any one doubt, though, that Dr. Michelson got out of life what he wanted, or that his reward was ample for his efforts? His work belongs to the ages and his fame will be everlasting. Best of all, it did not require his death to awaken the world to his importance.

What Others Say

AN AMERICAN MARKER ON WESSEX HEATH

Close by the small thatched cottage in which Thomas Hardy was born 90-odd years ago, his American admirers have reared him a sturdy monument, rough hewn in Cornish granite. Not far away rests quiet old Dorchester, where the chalk hills of the western downs narrow and turn away toward the sea's salt mist, rolling in with night from the channel. Under a low gray sky stretches Wessex Heath, land of the West Saxons, with its somber clusters of rural abodes, still the dwelling place of the vanishing remnants of Hardy's peasants—field hands, sheep herders, woodlanders—made secure in the human story by his photographic description. Here are the hedged roads familiar to Tess and the Eddon bypaths along which the native returned. Here was the hearthstone of Jude the obscure here Fanny Robin found death in the workhouse. To this cramped countryside Hardy held himself and his work. The squire of Max Gate stayed close to home. Yet it is not strange that metropolitan America should find the long-suffering Wessex folk an absorbing people. Hardy set their struggles in localized habits and manners, but he made them the struggles of men and women caught by the insatiable world over. That is the testimony of the new marker by the greenwood tree.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

The Stars Say

For Friday, July 24

According to the major aspects bearing rule on the affairs of this day there should be many excellent opportunities for advancement, promotion, honors, dignities and favors from those in places of position and power. It is an auspicious time for courting these, albeit with great discretion and tact, and preferably in old and tried lines, or employment, rather than in new ventures. The latter are beset with dangers and difficulties and there may be some sudden agitation.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of large opportunity for reaching high goals, with personal popularity and prestige, particularly in employment or in old and tested fields. Favors, promotion, honors are presaged in these, but new projects are hazardous, and there is menace of sudden upheavals. A child born on this day should be efficient, versatile, ambitious and should attain substantial favor in employment or enviable position on its own account.

Notable nativity: William Gillette, actor and author.

Serves Justice By Giving Up His Son

CLEVELAND, July 23.—Because his father, an elderly Canadian, believed the rules of justice must be served, Oscar Herbert Campbell 35, of St. Boniface, Manitoba, faced arraignment in a justice of the peace court here today on a charge of forgery.

The father, who is mayor of St. Boniface, gave his son to the police here last night after a 1,600-mile automobile trip from their home. The younger man spent the night in jail.

Before the surrender, Campbell and his father obtained the services of a lawyer and discussed the case with representatives of the county prosecutor's office. The elder Campbell indicated he would make restitution for the amount of the forgery.

The accused man was charged with forging a $645 check of a Canadian Life Insurance company, which had been given him to deliver to a Cleveland client. Campbell had been sought for more than a year by detectives here.

When the father heard of the situation, he insisted the son should answer the charge, and they drove all the way here to do it.

PARIS, July 23.—The Cafe de la Paix corner is still the liveliest in Paris. And to my notion the most democratic spot in all Europe. At the terrace tables, King Edward, the Prince of Wales, King Alfonso, King Albert and many other monarchs and high potentates have rubbed elbows with hot-pollot.

On the Capucines and opera side pavement are 350 marble topped tables with a capacity of 1,000. The tables begin to fill at in the morning and until 1 o'clock at night there are few vacant. It is a constantly shifting, polyglot and jealously crowd. One may buy a one-franc drink and sit all day.

The cafe is owned by the Grand hotel, occupying most of the block and has often paid 60 per cent on its common stock. Even during the trying days of the war it made money. Waiters receive no salaries but pay 15 francs a day to work there. Some have grown rich.

Considered by tourists a "yokel" retreat, its inside restaurants are the delight of gourmets from all parts of the world. From its cuisine one may order everything from shark's fin to Egyptian locusts in aspic. On its sidewalks chiefly drinks and ices are sold, at an average of five francs (20 cents) each.

From a chair there one watches all the world and his wife drift by. At the curb edge is a row of leafy maples. In the middle of the boulevard is a row of waiting flares with drooping drivers in glazed leather plug hats. Across the way the unceasing flow up and down the grand boulevards.

In the promenade one may see a coal black Senegalese with a monocle, a turbaned and white robed Moroccan "resistered" ladies expressing Parisian chic, a real shik from the Sahara, Yvette, the one-legged cocotte on white crutches, East Indian princes, British lords from across the channel and so on.

And etched in ugly bas-relief, a hunch backed viol hawk, the faceless war-wreck who cries "L'intransigent" through a sardonic slit, palsied map sellers, withered cronies who stand before you with hideous sores, whispering under-world guides and other beady-eyed rats of the sewers.

I have never seen what I could call a raving French beauty—on the stage, at the races, opera or fashionable Bois restaurants. There are a number who are "smart". That is they wear clothes with a superb dash but there are, I venture, more truly beautiful women in Louisville, Ky., than all France. The so-called middle class women of France are atrociously ugly, spotted and warty complexions, stringy hair, hairy lips and chins and invariably ungainly. Sometimes among the midnights there is a freshly vibrant and corn-fed beauty but it fades early.

Radio fans would get a big kick out of programs over here. Last night at a private home while twiddling the dial I got Spa, then Germany and all of a sudden, smack on the barrel—a Soviet lecture from Moscow. But the real thrill was when tiring of a rendition of "Carmen" in Italy, I twisted the dings and heard a booming voice singing "My Canary's Got Rings Under Its Eyes." It was Sophie Tucker in London.

In a hotel lobby I heard an American protesting over a hundred franc charge of a porter for buying a ticket to Frankfurt, Germany. "But" argued the porter, "many Americans give me a thousand francs for such service." Replied the Yank: "Maybe so. But they will not be coming over this summer."

The cigar box like shops under the ancient rue de Rivoli porticoes depend largely on tourists and consequently pickings are thin. But prices are as high as ever. Those of us who expected bargains this season can begin our hand-wringing the first day. New York is far cheaper.

A seller of dirty postcards sidled up near Rumpelmayer's and flashed his pornographic exhibit from under his coat. "What makes you think I'm interested in such trash?" I asked, hot under the collar. "American college boys always are," he replied. Thus complimented, had he been selling anything else I would have bought him out. Tomorrow I shop for a blazer and beret. Rah, rah, rah!

I was pleased to learn that a roar of voices each 9:30 a. m. through my hotel window was the recess shouting of a school nearby. Historians report a similar roar rising in Crescendo as the revolution got going. Several times I've started packing.

FANTASTIC "CURES"

Nothing is more interesting than to read some of the humorous advice given in Mark Train's stories. The use of "stump water," incantations, and black cats swung by the tail in the moonlight, were a few of the "cures" his characters recommended for warts.

For many centuries it was believed that warts decrease in size and number with the waning of the moon. To walk backward on a moonlight night to a hallow stump filled with water, into which the hand is thrust, is a sure cure!

In certain parts of England, it is still believed that warts rubbed with bacon will disappear. This cure takes place only if the bacon is afterward inserted under the bark of an ash tree! It was thought the warts of the victim would eventually show up as bumps on the tree.

A wart is a tumor of the skin. It develops on the hand, usually during childhood. Of course, a wart may be found on some other part of the body and it may be seen in adult life.

As a rule there is no pain attached to this tumor-like growth. A wart may cause pain if situated in a location where it becomes irritated, such as on the knuckles or along the nail. In such a position it is apt to crack and bleed, causing pain.

Warts that appear in large numbers on the backs of hands of children usually disappear, spontaneously, or may do so after some sort of local treatment. Single warts which appear in adult life do not disappear so readily.

They may be removed by a knife or by caustics. Monochloroacetic acid is extensively used for the removal of warts.

The acid should never be used without the supervision of your doctor. Too frequent applications may cause unpleasant damage to the skin.

The applications are continued once daily over a period of three days. The process may be repeated on another occasion and as often as is necessary to completely destroy and remove the wart.

Answers to Health Queries
Miss M. T. Q.—Are salts taken every morning for reducing purposes injurious?
A.—They should not be taken since they are apt to prove weakening.

B. Q. Q.—What is the cause of styes—the patient is a child of three years of age?

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

N. M. Q.—My baby is a little over a year old and he cannot sit up or hold his head up, what would you advise?

A.—Have your doctor examine him. After a personal examination he will determine what is wrong and advise you.

Billie. Q.—How much should a girl 15 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall weigh?

A.—She should weigh about 111 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

M. E. T. Q.—What can be done for perspiring feet and what causes them to swell? Would this be caused by a kidney condition?

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. If there is any reason to suspect a kidney condition have an examination so that definite advice and treatment can be given.

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Feodor Staire, attache of the British Embassy in Paris, was accused of the murder of Comte Henri D'Arbaye, and Greta, wife of Ronald Halkett, Feodor's best friend, had been under suspicion. Staire, 36 years old, and Toni Wareham, 21, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham and Greta's sister, were to marry in a few weeks. Ronald's newspaper work demanded long hours and Greta was much in the company of the wealthy D'Arbaye. Toni asked Staire to escort Greta home from the Bal Masque but she left with D'Arbaye. Staire followed and was outside D'Arbaye's apartment house, caught in a sudden storm, when Greta came running out, saying she shot D'Arbaye when he snatched her up in his arms and started to carry her into another room. She had forgotten her handbag. Feodor sent her home in a taxi, went back, wiped all fingerprints from the pistol, got the bag and was hailed by Staire, gave his name. He coached Greta by phone to say she did not enter D'Arbaye's apartment. Toni wanted to marry Feodor immediately when she learned he was to be taken to England for trial. She and her mother went to London to the home of Lady Alice's brother, Lord St. Maire. Travers Sinclair was retained to defend Feodor.

Installment XXI

"Understand, Sinclair, I will not go into the witness-box."

Feodor's tone, curt and authoritative, was not to be mistaken, and Travers Sinclair realized it, to his own increasing uneasiness. He was silent a moment, drawing hieroglyphics on the paper before him.

"You understand it will make a bad impression?"

"I suppose so. That can't be helped. You must put up the best defense you can, obstruct and question the prosecution; but if I go into the box I shall only succeed in hanging myself."

Travers Sinclair got up from his chair, and began walking up and down the narrow room; beyond the high barred windows the daylight filtered in, palely yellow from the smoke-laden London sky, and the small gas-fire that burned in the grate was depressingly inadequate. The famous lawyer was cold, and his physical discomfort was increased by his mental disturbance, for he was quite well aware that he had an extraordinarily difficult case to handle. His client's story was anything but satisfactory, and in his own mind, while believing Staire innocent, he also believed he was shielding the real murderer. Whichever it was, the defence would be painfully thin, resting more on the policy of forcing the prosecution to prove guilt, than enabling the prisoner to prove innocence.

He glanced at Staire now as he paced up and down the room, and frowned. A wholly innocent man would be anxious to tell his story—to have the chance from the witness-box to state the truth, and at least attempt to clear himself; but this man had refused from the beginning to risk cross-examination, and Sinclair was unhappy about it. That Staire knew more than he had admitted was a certainty, but that he was guilty Sinclair did not believe. He had met Staire in London and Parisian society several times and been very agreeably impressed by him. Though he knew too much of the complexities of highly civilized human nature to let that bias his judgment, even now his occasional keen glances did not correct that early impression but rather strengthened it.

Staire, for a man about to be tried for murder after over three months' detention without bail, was surprisingly calm and self-controlled. The case had been remanded twice, since the French evidence had taken time to collect—the policeman who was summoned when the body was found—D'Arbaye's chauffeur who had deposited his master and a lady at the former's door—the taxi-driver who had driven Feodor—people who had seen D'Arbaye at the masked ball at the Opera—the Commissaire who had questioned Feodor, and half a dozen others. Now the witnesses were finally assembled and the case about to come on, Staire, he thought, was standing the ordeal magnificently. He was pale, and the lines about mouth and eyes, always a little harsh, were now deep and firm, the eyes were strained, he looked years older, but his manner was as composed and courteous as ever, and whatever dark secrets his conscience might shelter, it was evident that he could command both nerves and temper with admirable skill.

Realizing there was no more to be said, Sinclair came to a standstill before his client's chair.

"Well," he said, "I think that's all. I have told you exactly what my line will be, and I will do all in my power for you. Luckily Margetson is an extraordinarily humane and mercifully-minded judge—more so than any other judge, I consider. I shall see you tomorrow for a few minutes. Please God, we'll pull it off!"

He went, leaving Feodor to be conducted back to his cell, and on the following day, the trial opened—as sensational a piece of legal drama as the most jaded appetite could desire.

The morning that Feodor's trial opened the rain descended in London in sheets of driving water, and the wind from the northeast made the streets a veritable purgatory for those afoot. Toni, very white, but quite composed, followed her mother and uncle into the latter's car, and during the drive to the Old Bailey sat looking straight before her not speaking, not even consciously seeing the gray, rain-swept pavements of hurrying traffic. These weeks of waiting had been to her a torture, which she had borne with an apparent stoicism that had secretly amazed her family. All her life Toni's habit had been to express her feelings loudly, remarking often that she could put up with anything Fate chose to deal to her, as long as those around her were aware of it, and expressed their sympathy or pleasure promptly.

What Lady Alice had not quite realized was that when it came to the depths of her nature Toni was an utterly different being, not desirous of breaking down the barriers of self-control and silence.

All the way she was silent, and Lord St. Maire's occasional jerky remarks were addressed solely to his sister, although his attention was for his niece, whose courage had called forth his secret admiration.

At the courts all was confusion; the crowding public, bewigged barristers, hurrying clerks, and policemen—large and imperturbable. Toni, still with that sense of unreality enfolded her, followed her uncle and mother, found herself in the courtroom, was put into a seat between them, and glancing around saw the crowd that filled the court and felt herself awake into active passionate life.

So this was what people did; ordinary decent people—they came to see a fellow-creature, who was an utter stranger to them, on trial for his life, tortured and questioned—came to watch with avid curiosity every change of expression or wince of pain—every privacy of mind outraged. These people would watch Feodor, try to peer beneath the mask of his face and find out what he was feeling and thinking. The fierce protectiveness of maternity leaped to life in Toni's heart; to save him that degradation, that shameful publicity, she would gladly have flung herself to torture or death.

St. Maire, watching her, saw her lips whiten and her body grow rigid—touching her arm he spoke in a curt undertone: "Hold on Toni—keep your head!"

Toni shot him one blazing glance; then he saw her steady herself by an effort visibly intense, and a moment later the judge's entrance was heralded as everyone rose.

From the opening of the case the interest in court was intense. There was not a seat, not an inch of room anywhere—such a scandal and such a sensation had not been known for years, and society crowded in—eager for a new excitement.

Toni came in for her full share of attention from acquaintances of her own world, but the public as such did not know who she was till the first day's proceedings were over, and by the beginning of the second she cared nothing for staring gaze or covert whisper, for was she not to see Feodor, to see him for the first time after twelve weeks—twelve interminable dreadful weeks? And though they would be able to exchange no word, the very sight of his face would mean something to her starving passion.

Maitre Siboux, Feodor's godfather, was in London, having come over for the French Government, and Toni had one moment with him before the court opened—a moment when he held her hands in his and looked steadily into her eyes.

"Courage, mon enfant!" he said, and had she but known it, he had used the same words to Feodor less than an hour before. "The good God is not absent because He hides His face," and Toni nodded, and for the first time that morning smiled very faintly.

"I will not forget," she said. "It is not me that matters. It is Feodor." But as the day advanced, as the long tedious hours passed, she realized that there comes a time when the over-driven body rebels; and a day or two later—just after the evidence given by the concierge who had spoken to Feodor on that fatal night—Toni's strength gave way in spite of her fierce determination to endure, and she sank without warning, a limp little figure against St. Maire. St. Maire was a big man, and picking her up he carried her out of the court. A few minutes later he was beside her in the car, very white with half-closed eyes, was listening to what he had to say.

"Toni, my dear, this may be a lengthy business—there are all these Frenchmen—the doctor, that old taxi-driver and the rest, to be heard yet. It's too complicated to be a quick case, and the defence is poor enough. I want you to be prepared for anything as a verdict and sentence. Anything. You understand?"

Toni could not go any whiter, but she moved her head in dazed assent, and St. Maire went on, speaking very decidedly and kindly, one hand firmly grasping hers.

"You must realize that the sentence—if Feodor is not acquitted—may be the worst. But it will not be carried out. No judge or jury can be satisfied with such very scanty circumstantial evidence. I hope to God Feodor will be acquitted. I believe he may—but if not, only one verdict can be given, and only one sentence. It is not possible to bring in a verdict of manslaughter for there is not the slightest evidence for it—no quarrel, no known dislike strong enough to suggest a scene of violence. It must be murder or acquittal! But, the verdict, once given, I shall go to the Home Secretary as will Sinclair, and you may be certain justice will not be permitted to miscarry. You have been magnificently brave up to now. For the sake of Staire you must be magnificently brave at the end, whatever it may be. For his sake can you promise?"

Toni nodded; her heavy lids lifted for a moment, and her eyes met her uncle's. "I promise," she said faintly. "I would not have been so stupid just now, but it was so hot. Don't worry about me. Help Feodor!"

"My dear child!" St. Maire bent forward and kissed her. "We will all help Feodor to the utmost extent of our power. Now you are to go straight upstairs, to drink what I send up, and get into bed and try to sleep," and Toni, worn out, astonishingly docile, did as she was told.

For another three days the trial continued, every inch of ground fought over and hotly contested, every witness for the prosecution questioned and trapped and argued with, every possible doubt thrown on the scanty evidence, Sinclair delivered a magnificent and eloquent speech, but Feodor's refusal to go into the witness box had made a bad impression. The judge's summing-up was scrupulously fair and unbiased, but the jury were shaken by that refusal. They were out about two hours, and when they filed in the hush in the court was profound. Feodor, very still, with shoulders slightly hunched and head thrust a little forward, waited like the rest, his mouth grimly set, his eyes like gray steel beneath their drawn brows, and Toni, rigid as marble, hardly dared to breathe as the questions were asked.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict....? Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty of the murder of Comte Henri Victor D'Arbaye?"

There was an instant's utter silence, then the foreman uttered one word:

"Guilty!"

"BROKEN DISHES" FIRST CHAUTAUQUA PLAY

Outstanding musical attractions, noteworthy features, varied entertainment features, and popular stage successes are all to be found on the coming Chautauqua program which will open July 28.

The first play of the week, to be presented on the opening night, will be Marvin Flavin's recent New York success, "Broken Dishes".

This is a domestic comedy, full of laughs and surprising situations. In the cast will be found Forrest Lewis, who will be remembered from last season's "The Perfect Alibi" and Kathryn Costin, from "The Molluso."

On the third day, "Her Husband's Wife" will be the bill. Chuck full of laughter, sparkling with bright dialogue and replete with ludicrous situations this comedy of Augusta Thomas has been proving one of the most popular nights of the week Chautauqua patrons will be interested in knowing that the lead will be played by Phyllis Mackeye, who took the title role in "The Molluso" last year.

The last of the week's plays will be "Grumpy", featuring Joseph B. Gifford in the title role. This play, made an international success on both stage and screen by Cyril Maude, has proven one of the outstanding character hits of the last decade. Rich with humor, it is also tense with most human dramatic situations.

All three of the plays are said to uphold in every way the high standard of play productions that Chautauqua patrons have learned to look forward to.

Chinese Officer Is Safe In Bomb Blast

SHANGHAI, July 23.—Two bombs and as fusillade of bullets directed at T. V. Soong, finance minister and vice chairman of the Nationalist government, missed their mark here today but fatally injured Soong's secretary, Tang Yu-Loh.

Six other Chinese were injured, some of them apparently by the fire of the unidentified assassins.

The attack was launched just after Soong and his party arrived by train from Nanking. The bombs failed to explode when thrown, but one of them was discharged later when picked up by a soldier. He was possibly fatally wounded. A Cantonese student was arrested later in connection with the incident.

Tang Yu-Loh was 32 years old and married recently. He formerly was a student at the Harvard and Yale universities.

Contest Closes Midnight August 2nd

"Lots of chances to win—

and 10 minutes now may bring you a small fortune!"

Remarks Floyd Gibbons, chairman of committee that will decide which 53 are best.

Hello everybody. At this stage of the game I suppose a hard-boiled old professional contest judge would be looking wise and saying nothing. But I'm new in the business, and so are Cliff and "Midge," the other "justices" in this little old "supreme court" of ours, and so I'm going out on a limb and pass along a tip. It ought to interest a lot of folks—those who've already sent in their contest letters as well as those who are still chewing the pencil. Here it is: That trip to Europe and that Four Thousand Dollars in gold still is anybody's!

There are no premiums for the early-birds. Late starters have just as good a chance as anybody—providing they get under the wire before midnight August 2nd.

Hoping to hear from you soon!

Trading Stagnates After Drops Result In Many Principal Issues

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 23.—Stock trading stagnated today after a little early selling had chipped a point or two from prices of many principal shares. These losses were partially regained, but with the market primarily interested in foreign reactions to the decisions reached at the London conference activity subsided to the recent low levels.

Steel issues were heavy, most members of the group losing at least a point. American Can sagged more than a point but rallied in active trading. New York Central made up most of an extreme decline of 1.

Atchison dropped 3 1/2 and Eastman Kodak and Crucible Steel 2.

There were nominal recessions in General Electric and General Motors.

Call money renewed at 1 1/2 per cent.

fired early today as he drove up to the home here of Frank V. Kennerly. He was placed in the Allen county jail.

Lloyd Krouse, to whose home 12 miles south of here Adams drove after the shooting, was held as a material witness. Krouse bandaged Adams' neck and then drove him in Krouse's car to Fort Wayne where they were taken into custody.

Major Howard Long, deputy prohibition administrator for northern Indiana, arrived today for an official investigation of the shooting. Arrival of Oliver M. Loomis, federal district attorney for northern Indiana, was awaited before Adams will be given a hearing.

Released Last January

Adams was released from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth last January. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas W. Slick of South Bend, Ind., Oct. 7, 1929, after pleading guilty to three federal liquor law charges.

Green, the informer who helped set the trap for Adams last night, was treated at a hospital, and then telephoned officers at Portland, asking a guard be stationed at his home to protect members of his family from possible attacks. Portland records revealed he had been convicted on 21 counts of liquor law violation, and had served the sentence concurrently.

Green and agent Gilbert spent an hour at Adams' home early last night, arranging for purchase of a load of liquor. They assigned the meeting place near Shellhorn bridge on the lower Huntington road a mile south of here. When Adams drove up, agents closed in, Adams drew a revolver, and the shooting began.

Gilbert fired the first shot, according to Green and Gettle, after Adams said: "I'm going to kill you...."

all they can produce. They are selling now at any price they can get because they must have money for machinery.

Yesterday Gaston Barbanson, a Great Belgian steel man, declared he has lost faith "in the American economic policy" and advocated "universal resumption of relations with Russia through an international body to open credits with the Soviet."

A 100 per cent success for the Russian five-year plan, according to Mr. Barbanson, would be no danger to the world, for Russians would buy as much as they would sell.

The nation, centuries ahead of Russia in industry and production, with all of its so-called "over production," is able to consume 90 per cent of all its products.

The world would be much better off.

off and our best minds would sleep peacefully if Russia could become successful and rich, in which case it would no longer be "Red" and if China and other countries, now harpessed with revolt and poverty, could follow suit.

If you are a "Capitalist" Leon Trotsky has bad news for you. He says either Russian sovietism or capitalism must die. They can't both continue to live side by side on the same globe.

Trotsky who helped Lenin in the early days, and has since been exiled, attacks Stalin as a mixture of socialism and capitalism.

Briefly Trotsky says that there must be a world revolution covering all nations, or sovietism must fall. That is bad news for Stalin, for there will be no world revolution.

Some concerns are making money. For instance, you may congratulate Gerard Swope, head of The General Electric Co., he announces $21,523,722.88 profit for the first six months of this year. It is not so good as last year but comes within five cents of earning the regular dividend.

Dividend Declared

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, July 23.—A dividend of 25 per cent or about $20,000, the first since it closed last Jan. 13, has been declared by the People's bank of Bloomingburg.

MOVIES

"THE GIRL HABIT"

At The Grand

"The Girl Habit", with Charles Ruggles in his first starring picture, is at the Grand today for the last time. This is Ruggles at his best as the wealthy bachelor engaged to marry Sue Conroy. He just can't be left alone by his many feminine admirers much to the disgust and suspicion of Miss Conroy's mother, played by Margaret Dumont.

"HUSH MONEY"

At The State

"Hush Money" featuring Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright plays at the State today for the last time.

The brave fight of a girl to save her husband's happiness, and the sanctity of her home, by keeping secret a "framed" jail sentence and the kindly aid of a friendly detective who plays off killer against killer is the plot of this story.

"THE BLACK CAMEL"

At The Grand

Teeming with thrills and suspense, "The Black Camel" comes to the Grand theater tomorrow as a worthy successor to "Charlie Chan Carries On," and again with Warner Oland in the role of the suave Chinese detective.

In the new picture the diplomatic Charles comes early on the scene when a famous screen star, Shelia Fane, is found mysteriously murdered on her luxurious estate at Waikiki Beach. There is a group of dinner guests, any of whom might have committed the crime, as well as several other suspects, and Charlie's job of finding the guilty man soon becomes a complicated one.

But through this tangled web of plot and intrigue, Charlie steadily makes his way, and eventually, with dramatic suddenness, discloses the two killers.

Posing as Sylvia's friend, Claudia seeks to separate Holmes and Sylvia, and at the same time arouse Sylvia's interest in Foster. After a mad escape with Claudia, Holmes is expelled, and disappears, Sylvia, believing he has deserted her, yields to Claudia's urging and marries Foster. But Holmes returns, and an exciting climax follows.

STRIBLING REAL SPORT SCHEMELING NOT SO GOOD

Max Schmeling gave Young Stribling a thorough lacing in their ring battle at Cleveland July 3, but the German champion failed to prove himself equal to the Georgia boy in the matter of sportmanship.

When Schmeling returned to Berlin after the bout he promptly accused Stribling of sticking his thumb in his eye in the first round. When Stribling returned to Macon, Ga., he settled the argument over whether Referee George Blake was justified in stopping the bout in the 15th and last round by saying: "I could have stuck it out, but I appreciate Blake's position. He did not wish to take any chances on having me seriously hurt."

With only 14 seconds to go, there is little doubt but that Stribling could have lasted and prevented the first knockout from being written against him in the record books. Actually, he had to stay only five seconds, as he would have been given the benefit of a nine-count had he gone down again. Schmeling, however, hit Stribling with everything he had after the Georgian got up from the floor, but was unable to send him down again.

Schmeling's accusation against Stribling wouldn't be so bad if it had been the first time he had pulled such a trick. After he failed to knock out Paulino Uzcudun, Schmeling claimed he hurt his right hand, or he would have finished the Basque. He thoroughly whipped Uzcudun, and didn't need any kind of alibi about his showing, yet he came up with one anyway.

After he won recognition as champion by a foul victory he went back to Germany and refused to return to this country and fulfill a promise to give Jack Sharkey a return match on the grounds that the low punch had seriously injured him.

By accusing Stribling of sticking his thumb in his eye, Schmeling seems to again be sparring for time in an effort to hold off Sharkey as long as possible. Schmeling isn't going to fight Sharkey until he has to, and the German hopes to delay the match until Sharkey will have passed his peak.

It is doubtful if Schmeling ever will be a popular heavyweight champion. His tactics do not attract the public. His exhibition tour of the United States perhaps made him more enemies than he ever will have followers. Schmeling refused to do more than his contract said three rounds of sparring, that's what Schmeling did, no more. He would not talk over the radio, visit newspapers and help in any way to ballyhoo his appearance.

Stribling would have made a popular champion. Tex Rickard realized the possibilities of Stribling a couple of years ago and probably would have made the Georgian champion if death had not cut short the promoter's career. Had Rickard been alive when Stribling fought Sharkey he probably would have postponed the bout when the Georgian developed an attack of neuritis in his shoulder shortly before the bout. Rickard liked Stribling because the southerner was easy to handle and would fight anyone.

After Gene Tunney retired as champion, several of the members of the so-called "600-millionaires" made up a pool of a number of the leading contenders for the title. Rickard bought the name of Stribling and was confident that the Georgian would become Tunney's successor. The heavyweight situation would have been quite different if Rickard had lived.

Legion Tossers Drop Verdict To Canton; Battin Stars Ahead

Salem teams won and lost in two well-played games at Centennial park field Wednesday, Charles H. Carey post No. 56, American Legion baseball club dropping a 12-0 verdict to Canton's youthful champions while the V. L. Battin All-Stars defeated Damascus, 7-4.

Victors of state championship honors a year ago, the Stark county diamond combination outclassed the Salem youths as Serra and Weaver, sharing mound duty, allowed only two hits. George Early hurled fine ball in defeating Damascus.

Canton Too Strong

The Legion youngsters were given several scoring opportunities, but ruined all of them with poor base-running. Five of the Salem lads were thrown out at first base by the two clever Canton slabsters who displayed all the talents of a good semi-pro hurler.

The visitors played sensational ball all the way, both defensively and on offense. Al Catlas was pounded for 21 hits which accounted for two runs in the second, fifth and seventh and five in the fourth. One run was tallied in the sixth.

E. Stratton and P. Stratton were only Salem players to connect for safeties.

Battins Look Good

The Battin stars played great ball for six innings but cracked in the last three frames to allow the visiting Damascus aggregation to score four times. Six errors by Salem aided the Quakers in tallying their runs. Joe Kelley was the star at bat, getting three doubles to score Jimmie Fitzpatrick with each drive. Early allowed only one hit for the six frames, not a man reaching first base after the first inning until the seventh. He granted the opponents four hits for the nine innings while Wilson was hit for 11 safeties.

STRATTON WILL BATTLE TEXAN

Return Bout Scheduled at Idora Park Monday; 2 Features Slated

Walter "Buck" Stratton, on the road to complete recovery from injuries in his last clash with Bobby Chick, Houston, Texas, grappler, battles the Texan again at Idora park, Youngstown, in the feature bout of a show staged by Al Zill, Monday night.

Chick Wins First Bout
Chick put Stratton on the hospital list when they met the first time in Zill's outdoor arena, forcing the powerful Leetonian to default when he was unable to return for the third fall. A double arm stretch was the hold used by Chick in gaining the victory. Stratton said today he is almost fully recovered from injuries sustained in the wrestling ring and hopes to even accounts with the Cowpuncher. Their clash is scheduled for best two out of three falls with one-hour limit.

Buchwalter Returns
George Buchwalter of Warren, Western Reserve college wrestling instructor who made a great hit in defeating Billy Romanoff in straight falls, makes a return appearance when he exploits talents with Frank Taylor, veteran Texan hailing from Chick's home city.

This match will also go three falls, one-hour limit. A special feature of the show will be Belinski, iron man of Siberia. Belinski will perform feats of strength between bouts.

Wins Laurels In Draw

Mickey Walker, former middleweight champion of the world, is being lauded by American fight fans today as a result of his draw with Jack Sharkey, Boston, Mass., sailorman, in a thrilling battle at Brooklyn last night.

Nine Brothers Form Own Baseball Team

VANDERFRIFT, Pa., July 23—The Spaniel baseball nine, Kiski Valley baseball team, is composed of nine Spaniel brothers. The youngest, 12, has played three years in American Legion junior ball, while the oldest is a veteran semi-pro player.

If one of the Spaniel brothers is injured, or the pitcher gets a drubbing, Manager Spaniel calls on a cousin—named Spaniel—for relief work.

Fans Boo Verdict As New Jersey Battler Puts Up Great Fight

BY EDWARD J. NEIL

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 23—The official decision says Jack Sharkey didn't lose, but on lion-hearted little Mickey Walker fightday today showers all the acclaim and golden promises that go to a new-comer scaling the heavyweights heights.

In the very heart of the heavy-weight picture is the rugged, grinning, battle-scarred face of the chunky fellow from Rumson, N. J., welterweight and middleweight titleholder in his time, now at least as good as Sharkey because two learned judges and a referee compromised on a draw after 15 rounds of hurly-burly battle in Ebbets field last night.

Certainly Mickey turned in the most surprising upset of many a fight season as he harassed the big sailorman. The battle revealed Sharkey in another of his disappointing struggles and gave a crowd of 32,000 a chance to boo and exit in his discomfort.

There was no question who the crowd that almost filled the National league ball yard thought had won but the arbiters arrived at the compromise decision by every possible route left open to them.

Says Walker Won
Referee Arthur Donovan, for instance, thought the bulldog courage, the eternal aggressiveness of the little fellow who gave Sharkey an advantage of 29 pounds, inches in height and reach, entitled Mickey to the decision. Judge George Mickey voted Sharkey the award apparently on the basis of his right hand punching that gashed Walker's left eyelid in the fifth round and opened it wide in the closing session. Judge Charles F. Mathison chose the middle course and called it a draw while the Associated Press score sheet counted up the same way, with seven rounds for Walker, seven for Sharkey and one even.

But regardless of the futility of the decision, honors for the evening swept into the lap of Walker, the 109½ pounder who dared tackle Sharkey, weighing 198½, out-bulled and out-punched him for ten rounds, and slipped back only when the embattled sailor rallied fiercely to try and save the day in the last four rounds.

Opens Mickey's Eye
Sharkey found the range then with the long right hand punches and short clubbing smashes in close that opened wide the gash in Mickey's left eyelid. Blood poured down Walker's cheek, smeared his features into a red, grinning false face, and gave the erratic Sharkey the incentive to come on in and tie the count.

Sharkey plainly showed the effects of his ring layoff of over a year since he lost his chance to win the heavyweight title by fouling Max Schmeling in the fourth round two Junes ago.

Only once, until the blood began to course freely down his face was Mickey in danger. Caught off balance in the fifth round, a right to the chin bounced Walker to the carpet but he jumped up immediately and there was no count.

Mickey made up for his bad fifth inning by staggering Sharkey in the eleventh. Three times, in the fifth, eighth and fifteenth rounds, Sharkey was warned either for low blows or butting.

Trolley Veteran Quits; Tells Of Early Problems

John Weber, 67, of Louisville, the first and only roadmaster of the Stark Electric Railroad company, who helped to build part of the line nearly 30 years ago, has retired.

Weber joined the Stark Electric when it was a four-mile line connecting Alliance and Sebring. He began as a laborer and scraper mechanic, but was soon made construction foreman.

"We had our troubles building the line," Weber commented. "Down near Damascus one day, an opponent of the traction line came along and hitched his team of horses to our rails. He pulled up a section of track, but we soon replaced it."

Considerable opposition developed against the building of the line between Alliance and Salem.

Upon completion of the line, Weber was named roadmaster in charge of all repair work over the 33 miles of track between Canton and Salem. With the exception of a few months when he was affiliated with another Alliance company, Weber has been in the continuous service of the Stark Electric.

Prior to joining the Stark Electric, Weber was with the Pennsylvania Railroad company for 19 years, beginning as a laborer and working to a road foremanship, which position he held when he resigned to join the Stark Electric.

Weber's duties are being combined with those of R. D. Miller, superintendent of equipment.

Trolley Veteran Quits; Tells Of Early Problems

John Weber, 67, of Louisville, the first and only roadmaster of the Stark Electric Railroad company, who helped to build part of the line nearly 30 years ago, has retired.

Weber joined the Stark Electric when it was a four-mile line connecting Alliance and Sebring. He began as a laborer and scraper mechanic, but was soon made construction foreman.

"We had our troubles building the line," Weber commented. "Down near Damascus one day, an opponent of the traction line came along and hitched his team of horses to our rails. He pulled up a section of track, but we soon replaced it."

Considerable opposition developed against the building of the line between Alliance and Salem.

Upon completion of the line, Weber was named roadmaster in charge of all repair work over the 33 miles of track between Canton and Salem. With the exception of a few months when he was affiliated with another Alliance company, Weber has been in the continuous service of the Stark Electric.

Prior to joining the Stark Electric, Weber was with the Pennsylvania Railroad company for 19 years, beginning as a laborer and working to a road foremanship, which position he held when he resigned to join the Stark Electric.

Weber's duties are being combined with those of R. D. Miller, superintendent of equipment.
